PRINCESS ELIZABETH and Princess Margaret were taken by the Queen recently to their first West End production of a Shakespeare play-"Twelfth Night," at the Phoenix Theatre, Charing Cross-road.

It was a surprise visit as an extra treat by the King in cele-bration of his birthday. The Queen, all in black, and wearing pearls and a diamond brooch, sat with the Princesses in a box with their governess, Miss Crawford.

WHY is the name of Dr. A. J. Cronin not associated with the film. "The Citadel," now being shown in London?

This question is being by hundreds of nuzzlėd film-goers.

No book of recent years created such a deep and wideimpression as Citadel" when it was published was a slashing attack on medical "gunckery," which provoked a nation-wide controversy. The book rapidly became a best seller. To the man in the street the title of the book, "The Citadel," was instluctively linked with the name of the author, A. J. Cronin. When the film rights were sold to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer it was understood they paid Dr. Cronin a sum which was a record for a British novel. The film was made with Robert Donat and Rosalind Russell in the leading parts. King Vidor directed .it. Victor Saville produced it, and more than 100 well-known British actors and actresses played in it.

THE ONE OMISSION At its premiere the film was halled

EXPLORER HAD BABY HE NEVER SAW

MR. REYNOLD J. O. BRAY, twenty-seven-year-old explorer, news of whose death in the Arctic last September was brought by an Eskimo to civilisation recently, was the father of a baby daughter he never saw -born a month before he was drowned.

He married four years ago the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Butler, of Claygate, Surrey, and had spent much time since exploring in Hudson Bay and Baffin Land, regions where no white man had ever been.

His father, Major Jocelyn Bray, of Newark, near Ripley, Surrey, estate agent to Mary, Countess Lovelace, sald: "He was a wanderer. His wife has always sald she would never have fallen in love with him if he had been any different."

Mrs. Butler said: "My daughter never put obstacles in his way. He was an ornithologist and a scientist, and if his work took him away-well, he had to go. Men have to go their ways. This was to have been his last journey to the Arctic, at any rate for many years.

"He had a book to write, already commissioned. He had much work to do. His life was planned for years | the Foreign Office were asked to preahead."

The Pope of Peace

A CHILLE RATTI, 261st Pope, "Servant of the Servant of God", the man whom the world will call the "Pope of Peace", is Pope Pius XI suffered from cardiac asthma, hardened arteries, severe varicose veins. Many times they said he was dying. But he refused, for many long months, to die. There was so much he had to do, so much evil in the world in which he gave spiritual guidance to four hundred million of its people, that this brave old man willed himself to live beyond his allotted span.

He received the sacrament of Extreme Unction nearly six months ago. That is, the last anointing. But his recovery then was miraculous.

Himself, he thought that his early love of the mountains gave him enduring strength. As a mountaineer, he made a new and more difficult way to the summit of Mount Rosa in the Alps, second highest mountain in Europe.

He was a holy man, as Bishop Valtorta said yesterday. His temporal kingdom extended far beyond the bounds of the Vatican. - •

On earth, he was omnipotent in the sense that, to the devout of the greatest and most powerful Church, his word was Divine.

Yet with omnipotence there was simplicity in the Pope who has just died. When he lived in England, which was many years ago, he lived as millions of Englishmen lived. He used to eat his meals at railway station buffets. Once in Leeds he was eating a ham sandwich. The train set off without him. He sprinted. Porters cheered as the future Pope swung himself into the guard's van.

But it is not this characteristic of simplicity by which he will be remembered by the world -by Catholics and non-Catholics alike.

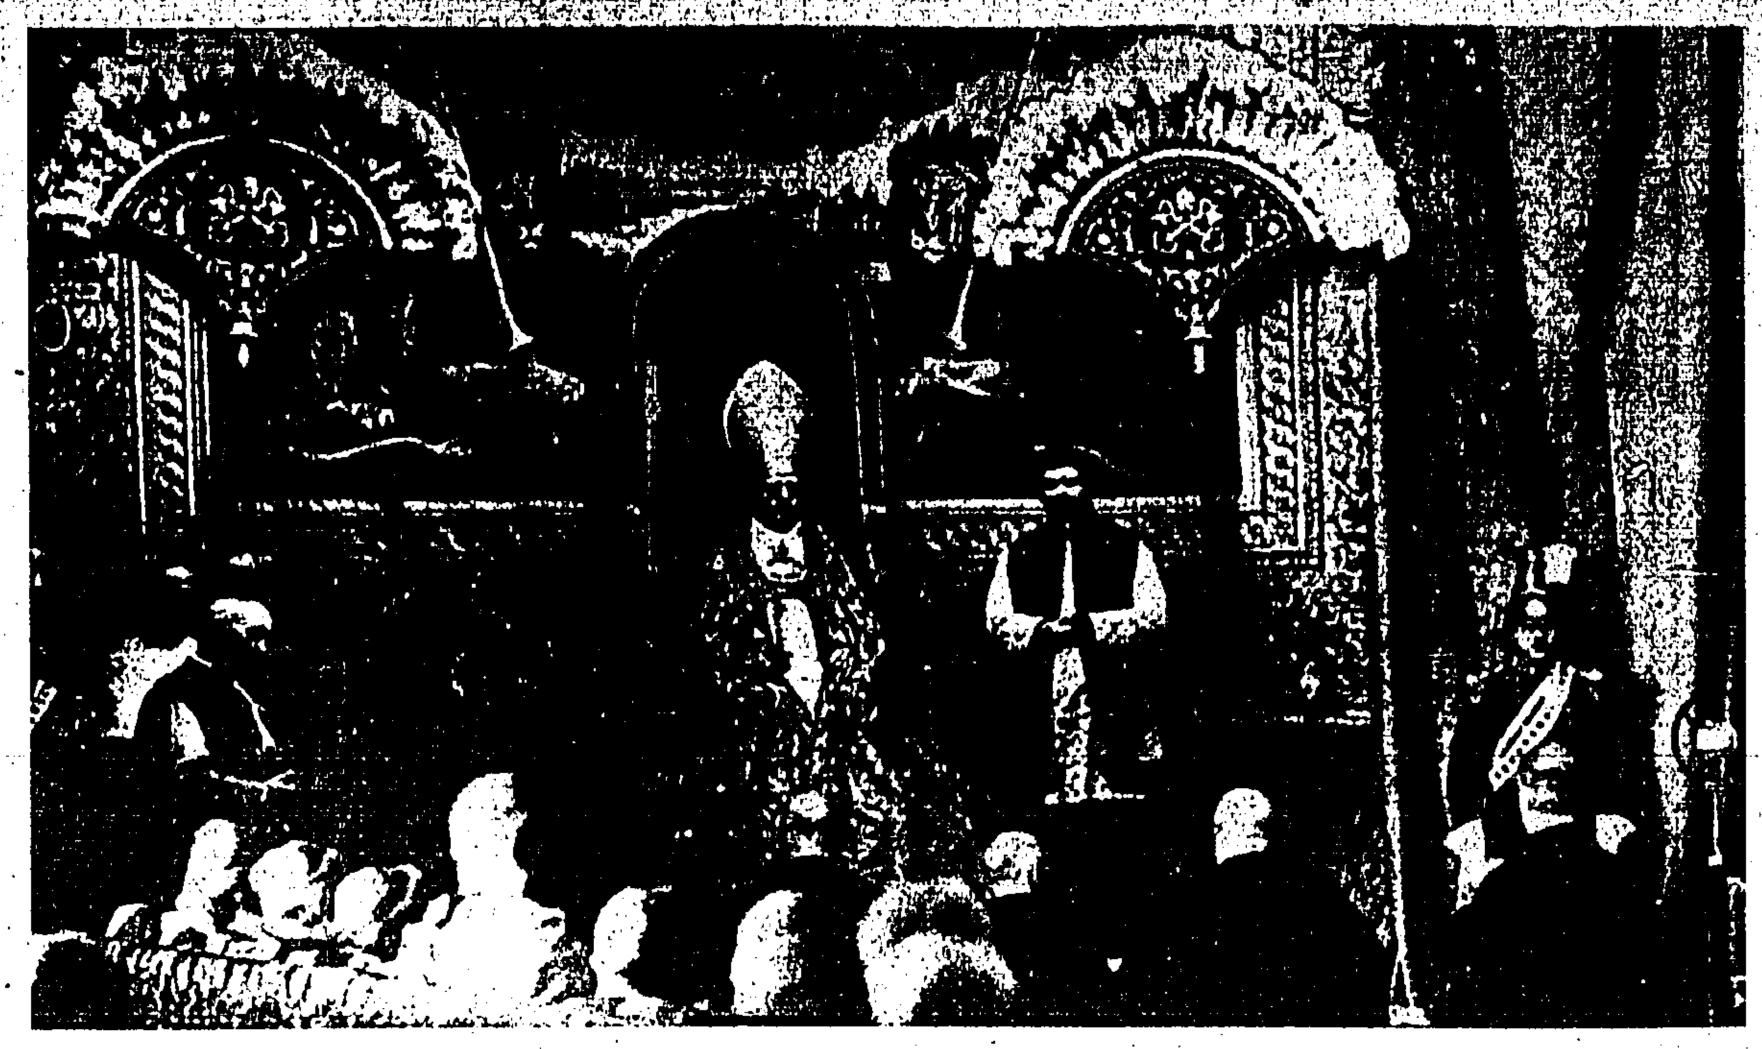

He was the "Pope of Peace" —the one man in the world who was not afraid of the Totalitarian dictators. He condemned "heretical" speeches made by Mussolini, anubbed Hitler on his recent visit to Rome. No other man could have done that.

Almost to the end, the Pope nsisted on celebrating Mass. From the time he first became priest to his death he celebrated Mass more than 20,000 Nothing, no one, could stop him no matter how ill be

The Pope of Peace

A newborn babe, Achille Ratti, lay in his crib in a humble Italian home. The sun shone behind a church tower, cast the shadow of a cross into the room. The shadow rested on the baby's crib.

That was in 1857. In 1922, that babe became Pope Pius XI, the 261st head of the Roman Catholic church: When a boy he was an industrious student. He early decided to enter the priesthood. As a priest, mountain climbing was his favourite sport. Once his guide slipped into a crevice. The priest wrapped his robe around his waist, rescued the guide after a great struggle.

He climbed the Matterhorn, Mt. Blanc, Vesuvius, published pamphlets and a book on climbing. He introduced radio, telephone, autos to the Vatican, encouraged others to engage in sports.

The Vatiean is filled with priceless art treasures, but the Pope's living quarters are as simple as the rooms of any parish priest. Before the illness, that ended yesterday in death, his daily schedule was: 6:30, he arose, dressed, shaved; 7:30, said mass in his private chapel, breakfasted; 8:30 to 4, received all callers, from kings to humble pilgrims; 4, he dired alone while a secretary read to him; 4:30, he was driven in the Vatican grounds; in the evening he received more callers, retired at 10:30 after a light supper and prayers.

He ate simply; a few monks prepared his soup, meat, fish, cheese, fruit, bread and milk. World-wide peace was his great goal.

He won fame as a diplomat and a scholar, even before he became He and Mussolini signed the Lateran Pact in 1929, ending a long feud between Church and State.

Once a week, on Fridays, the Pope himself knelt before a simple mortal. A modest little priest, who did not occupy a position of rank, quietly mounted the steps to the papal suite and in his chapel listened to the Pope's confession, grunted him absolution. For even the Popt, to whom millions look up as God's earthly representative, may sin as a man, Then his confessor knelt, received the papal benediction.

HANDING OVER MINORCA

Insurgents Latest Achievement

SAN SEBASTIAN, Feb. 9. THE EARLY transfer of Minorca to the Insurgent Government seems to be regarded as certain in Insurgent political circles.

According to reports received here, preparations for handing the Island over to General Franco's forces are nearly complete.

On the other hand, no information is forthcoming concerning foreign Press reports that negotiations have taken place on H.M.S. Devonshire between the military governor of Majorca and representatives of the Loyalist garrison of Minorca.

Violent clashes which are said to have occurred between the garrison and part of the civilian population appear to have extended as far south as Port Mahon,—Trans-Ocean,

Paris, Feb. 10. Figure declares that the symbolic occupation of Minorea took place without the German and Italian general staffs being notified. They had, however, prepared all kinds of plans to establish a naval base the moment the island was occupied just os they did at Palma Majorea. Raid Confirmed

London, Feb. 10. It is confirmed in London that an air raid on Minorca occurred while H.M.S. Devonshire was at Port Mahon. This was despite the understanding with the Insurgent authorities at Majorca, at whose initiative was agreed to allow the cruiser to act as a "ferry" for the Insurgent emissary and that no raid should take place during the cruiser's visit.

Japanese Goods Flood The City Effect Of Control

Canton, Feb. 10.
Though the hopes of many are growing for a speedy recovery in Canton yet there are many evidences of opposition to the present programme on every side. In fact the plan promoted by the present leaders is nothing more or less than the promotion of Japanese trade to the exclusion of all others. Many facts are constantly being made known to prove such a contention. If one is going to go into business again he must use Japanese money that is used by the military to buy his goods. This money which is a kind of script so far as can be obtained has very little back of it. Not only is this true, but the only stock of goods that can arrive is of the country now claiming control. Those merchants and traders who buy and use Japanese goods are given the first advantage even to the best stores and

But what is common to every girl in all the world is the desire to be more lovely and more elegant than ever before on that highly important and happy day.

And so the wedding dress, the coiffure, the disposition of the veil are extremely important.

For Tall Brides

GREAT many dressmakers ad-A vocate the use of lame or of white and sliver brocaded satin. These stuffs make dresses which are very levely, very rich-but they are only suitable to women who are tall and slender and possessed of enough authority not to appear crushed by the luxurious material.

Usually the dresses executed in these stuffs are quite simple; the corsage is closed cleanly at the neck line, the sleeves are long and narrow and come down a little over the hand, the waist is very fitted, and the skirt moulds the silhouette closely.

SERIES OF GAMES ON CLUB GROUND TO-DAY

(By "Fly-Half")

This afternoon at 4 p.m. the Malayans will complete their series of rugger matches in Hongkong when they will meet the Colony XV. Both sides are formidable and a forecast of the result must be an open one.

The visitors have suffered a great deal from injuries but all except Lyle have made good recoverles.
However, a desire to put on the field the best side available had prevented

Henderson is also another to dash over from scrums, so much will depend on whether the respective wing forwards give them time to get into stride. Both are capable of relieving pressure by hefty punts whilst their passing cannot be criticised.

On Tucsday's showing, there appeared little to choose between the stand-offs who will play to-day. However, with Elliot in form the Colony may have no fear.

DANGEROUS THREES

The Hongkong threes on paper are the most dangerous department the team. Should they combine well, they should collect plenty of tries. The insides, Grieve and Askwith, are very clever in attack and dour in defence. Stewart and Bidwell, on the wings, are fast and once they get through it will take some chasing to overtake them.

Harper, the visitors' captain who rested from Tuesday's game because of a brulsed leg, will be fit for this afternoon's encounter and much is expected from him. His team-mates faver that he was much below form last Saturday and yet he made few mistakes; so it is hoped he will be back into shape now that he has recovered his shore legs.
